Canvassing for Washington's Most Vulnerable Democrat

Whether Democrats control the House in 2027 and can take steps to strengthen democracy will be determined by just a few seats - and one of the most vulnerable Democratic incumbents is right here in Washington, in the 3rd Congressional District in southwest Washington State.

Steve Johnson is organizing door-to-door canvassing for the campaign in Centralia - about a 1.5 hour drive south of Bainbridge. The plan is to meet in the morning on Bainbridge, carpool to Centralia, work doing door-to-door contact with voters from 10-4 (the campaign will train you), have a celebratory pizza dinner and return to Bainbridge by early evening. The dates are Saturday October 10, October 17 and October 24. Contact Steve <stevej7775@gmail.com> to learn more. Common Power is also organizing canvassing in the 3rd District on other dates - more info at <https://www.mobilize.us/commonpower/event/1005649/>

Canvassing in Arizona's 6th District

Another important seat to win is in Arizona's 6th District, near Tucson. Rep. Emily Randall, who represents our district, Washington's 6th, has adopted Arizona's 6th and is organizing a trip to Arizona to canvass for challenger Joann Mendoza October 10-11.
